Hey Guys!

Just wanted to drop you a line and let you know I heard the Graham's Summer Clearance is starting. They haven't had a big sale since winter so there's a ton of great stuff on sale. OH, and you both need to come down because there's a huge selection for both men and women. All those brands you think you need to go to Chicago to find. We'll load up and then hit the river for a while. See you soon! Tell Ben I sent ya!

P.S. You can thank me later!

Where's Wando
We've hidden Wando somewhere in this issue of 365ink. Can you find him?

I see that Farm & Fleet is planning to build a store out in the Asbury Plaza. I gotta say, I think that's too bad.

I don't have anything against Farm & Fleet. I actually don't know much at all about Farm & Fleet short of being able to sing their jingle in my head. It's actually Blain's Farm & Fleet and is family owned, I looked that up. I'd say that in my youth, working on Grandpa's farm in Stitzer, WI, that we even went to Farm & Fleet, but I think back then it was Gassers that we frequented. Either way, I would bet that they are likely good people and probably give back to their communities, especially Janesville, WI where I assume they are still based. And that's just it. They are a regional chain based in a community about the same size as Dubuque.

The thing is, we already have a "Farm & Fleet" in Dubuque, and it's called Theisen's. It's been here since 1927 and does a stellar job of serving the Dubuque community in both a retail as well as a civic capacity.

Anyone who shops at Theisen's knows about their people and the quality of their service as well as their selection, especially in those retail areas that you just don't find in a traditional hardware store or the big box stores. The big boxes have their place, and I shop there, too, on occasion, just as I usually go to Steve's Ace for pretty much everything plant, tool and home repair related. But there are some things where your soul just knows that the only place you're going to find that is at Theisen's. And like so many old guys will tell ya, "If they don't have it at Theisen's, you don't need it."

Yes, you can get the things you need, probably even the hard to find things at a number of places, including online, these days. But there's a much bigger part of the picture to consider here.

Theisen's is itself a regional chain of family-owned stores. There are two very important facts related to that which make this important to Dubuque.

One, Theisen's is not just located in Dubuque, it based out of Dubuque. We are the hometown of this successful, large business. You'd better believe that has an impact on our community outside of bragging rights. I'm not even talking tax revenue and employment, which are obviously key factors (and yes, I know that Farm & Fleet will also hire Dubuquers). The second fact, and the part that makes me most disheartened to see Farm & Fleet move into town, is that Theisen's is incredibly generous to the Dubuque community. As much as that's a corporate philosophy, it comes from a simple place. The Theisen family itself is incredibly generous to the Dubuque community.

You don't have to spend much time with Jim Theisen to realize that the man has his head and his heart in the right place. I may be biased, as I run the Marine Corps Toys For Tots program in Dubuque, and can speak personally to the incredible generosity of Jim, his sons and his local staff. But the thing is, I am one of a legion of Dubuquers involved in causes and charities that do good works, and I'll bet every one of them can tell you a story of generosity coming from the Theisen's family, and by family, I'm including everyone who wears a name tag. Simply put, they are amazingly good for our community and their growth and success only increases the value they have locally.

So, while I have nothing at all against a company expanding and finding new markets, and as I normally love to see new businesses investing in the Dubuque area, this is one I can't say that I look forward to. I feel as though everyone who shops there will be making a conscious choice not to support their own community when you could have. You're investing in Janesville's success, not Dubuque's. I know that's harsh to the Blains. Sorry guys. I'd think the same thing if Theisen's dropped a store in Janesville. I just don't think they'd do something like that. (Well, maybe now...)

I had heard once that Farm & Fleet and Fleet Farm (another similar store chain in the same region) were the result of some family feud, but that isn't the case. It was two separate families who started similar businesses about the same time that knew each other and were part of the same buying group in the 50's. They have an unwritten rule that they won't open a store in the same town as the competitor. In a world where it seems the enemy of the locally-owned business is the national big box chain, it would be nice to see all of these "local" guys follow that same practice on a larger scale. When they choose to make battle against their neighbor, they risk losing the larger war against those giants that don't seem to have to fight fair. If nothing else, if you're going to move into someone's neighborhood, have the decency not build in their backyard. Maybe it's a brilliant cut-throat strategic business practice, but it's certainly not a family way of doing things.

Dubuque... and All That Jazz!

Town Clock Plaza

Friday, July 19, 5 - 9:30 p.m.

The Business is a sensational Chicago-based 13-piece horn band with a wide variety of musical styles. With songs ranging from R&B/Soul, Funk, Big Band, Swing, Motown, Salsa, and even Mariachi, they'll put on a fantastic show! Jazz! also means the chance to connect with fellow Dubuquers over delicious dinner options from local food vendors, and ice-cold beer, new wine options, and Pepsi products served by the Dubuque Jaycees. Food Vendors include: Betty Jane Candies, Carlos O'Kellys, the Food Store, Freddie's Popcorn, the Maria House, Rhody's Food & Spirits, The Food Store, Town Clock Inn, the Watershed Café, and West Dubuque Tap. The August 16 installment of Jazz will welcome Viva Brazil and on September 6, enjoy local favorites River Glen and The Lonely Goats.

Guys and Dolls

July 19 & 20, 7 p.m., July 21, 2 p.m.

Ohnward Fine Arts Center

The Ohnward Fine Arts Players and the Peace Pipe Players present Guys and Dolls. Set in Damon Runyon's mythical New York City, this odd-ball romantic comedy - considered by many to be the perfect musical comedy - soars with the spirit of Broadway as it introduces us to a cast of vivid characters who have become legends in the canon: Sarah

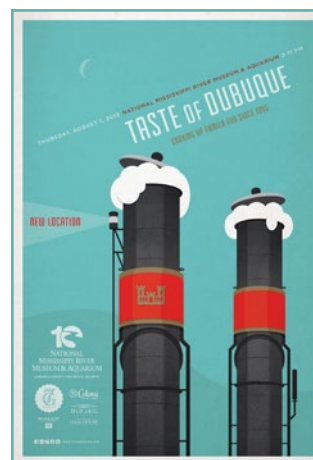

Brown, the upright but uptight "mission doll," out to reform the evildoers of Time Square; Sky Masterson, the slick, high-rolling gambler who woos her on a bet and ends up falling in love; Adelaide, the chronically ill nightclub performer whose condition is brought on by the fact she's been engaged to the same man for 14 years; and Nathan Detroit, her devoted fiancé, desperate as always to find a spot for his infamous floating crap game. Tickets are $15 in advance or $18 at the door. Let this be the show that finally lets you discover the wonderful arts venue in Maquoketa, IA!

A Deadly Dinner

Friday, July 19, 5:30 p.m.

Miss Dubuque at Dubuque River Rides Port of Dubuque

Die-Laughing Murder Mystery presents a mirthful morsel of mystery, the all-new and much awaited sequel to Dinner a la Morte. It's 1933, and Tiffany "Gold" Digman's guests want to know: Was her murdered husband Sterling's career as an archeologist on the level? What will his friends dig up when they gather to drink a toast to his days on earth? Reservations are required; register at www.dubuqueriverrides.com. Taste of Dubuque

Thursday, Aug. 1, 3-11 p.m.
National Mississippi River Museum & Aquarium

Taste of Dubuque will be held on Thursday, August 1, 2013 from 3 - 11 p.m. in its new location on the grounds of the National Mississippi River Museum & Aquarium at the corner of 3rd and Bell Streets in the Port of Dubuque.

In addition to the date change, the event is being moved back to the Museum & Aquarium to make use of the new River Plaza between the two buildings of the National Mississippi River Museum & Aquarium.

New, by popular demand, each vendor will be offering sample-sized, low-cost, portions of their choice to provide the opportunity to have just a "taste."

Four live bands on two stages will anchor the entertainment at this year's Taste. The main stage will feature live music by Weed and Roses headlining from 8 to 11 p.m. as well as Kruzer, Broken Strings and Jake Bender. The Taste of Dubuque will also feature a Kids Corner from 3 to 8 p.m. with various games and activities including an inflatable playground, costumed mascots from 5- 7 p.m., the Elite Dance Team at 7 p.m., and appearances by the USHL Champion Dubuque Fighting Saints. See the ad on page 3 for a full schedule of events, performance times and stages.

Parking for will be available in the Port of Dubuque public parking ramp or take the City of Dubuque Trolley from other downtown ramps from 4-11 p.m.. with stops at 5th and Iowa St., 7th and Iowa St. and 3rd and Main St.

Advanced food and beverage tickets will be available at the Museum box office starting July 26, 2013. Also new this year, food and beverage tickets can be purchased by credit/debit card.

Admission to the Taste of Dubuque is free; however, the Dubuque County Historical Society will be accepting donations at the admission gate. All proceeds will benefit properties operated and maintained by the Dubuque County Historical Society.

Rapids and even as far away as Germany.

"This event was an idea that we had high hopes would take off," says Keith Rahe, President of the Dubuque Convention & Visitors Bureau (CVB). "It really has exceeded our expectations. As a travel destination, our goal is to bring people to the area and offer unique things for them to do. The Mantastic Guyathlon does just that. Whether you are a high performing athlete or not, you can come to Dubuque, have some fun, let loose, and take part in some friendly competition." This year's event offers 3 divisions – Pro, Amateur & Senior – to welcome competitors at every level. The event kicks off with a rules meeting on Friday, August 2nd, swings into action on Saturday, August 3rd and concludes Sunday, August 4th. Cash prizes are given to the top performing teams. More details can be found at www.traveldubuque.com. Event is sponsored by Mystique Casino, Radio Dubuque's 97.3 KGRR, Dubuque Area Convention & Visitors Bureau and the Dubuque Regional Sports Commission.

MAKEDOVER

My husband and I shopped locally for a loan on a used truck, but the rates quoted seemed high. We were frustrated. Then we heard Dupaco's Money Makeover takes a good look at your total financial picture—and can often uncover hidden money. We were fascinated! Sarah at Dupaco took a look at our credit history and explained that our high credit card balances were driving our credit score down—and our loan interest rates up. We were humiliated. So she consolidated $25,000 worth of credit card debt, saving us $550 a month. Then she took $200 of that amount and opened a Roth IRA. By the time our oldest goes off to college, we'll have almost $30,000. If we leave it there, we'll have $300,000 at retirement. We were exhilarated! You can bank on a bank for some things. But give credit to a credit union like Dupaco for putting people before profits. We went in frustrated. And came out infatuated.

Les Misérables

July 26-28, August 1-4
The Grand Opera House

by Bryce Parks

From July 26–August 4, The Grand Opera House presents its fourth annual and much anticipated all-star student production. True to form, they've once again outdone themselves with the area's first ever full production of the beloved Broadway hit Les Misérables. In just three years, staging RENT, Phantom of the Opera and Sweeney Todd, this staged series has earned an impressive group of fans with ever-growing expectations for great things.

In anticipation of the big show, we sat down the show's director, Joe Klinebriel as well as Paul Hemmer, the director of the Grand Opera House, to better understand why these shows create such great buzz. The biggest thing we learned was to take your preconceptions of a "student production" and throw them out the window.

"The quality of what Joe Kleinbriel, Bob Demaree and Megan MacLeod (pictured below/right respectively) have been able to pull out of these kids..." says Paul Hemmer, failing to find the words to finish the sentence. "Number one, the kids are really talented, no doubt about it. I mean, they are exceptionally talented young people. But what they've been able to pull out of them is just incredible. Bob Demaree has been a teacher for a long time and he still says Phantom of the Opera was the highlight of his personal career."

Mr. Les Misérables

"This cast is full of phenomenal performers, solid all the way through, and they're doing such advanced, moving work," shares Director Joe Kleinbriel, whose own list of theater credits includes his current 12-year run teaching theater at Clarke University. "I'm not a waterworks kind of person, but I'm in the audience watching them rehearse, and I'm just moved to tears by their performances. So good. So good."

It was clear to the Grand Opera House that between the many high schools in the area, there was a wealth of talent that was not being brought together to make something truly special. Thus, the all-star student productions were born. The first year with RENT was a stellar all-star high school only production. However, it was in the second year with Phantom of the Opera that there was a need to reach out to a more mature bracket but still stay in the student realm. The creative team thought it would be a great idea to expand it to all of the talent in our local colleges and the regional high schools as well as students who went off to other colleges but came home for the summer.

You know how you go see that high school play or musical and there's always one or two kids in the show that just soar in their performances? Well, take those kids from a dozen schools and colleges and you start to get the picture.

"We had 99 audition for a cast of 32. So we left 66 people heartbroken," Hemmer joked with at least a touch of hyperbole. These are the best of the best. But the idea is not just to get the best, but also to give them the best experience for their own burgeoning theater careers.

"We aimed to capitalize on this experience and give the kids the most professional experience we could give them," shares Kleinbriel. "Megan MacLeod has been the choreographer for these last two seasons, and we had Marina O'Rourke for Phantom. So, we're working with fantastic choreographers. Bob Demaree is just phenomenal at what he does, and I try to hold up my end of the bargain as well. We try to give them the most professional experience we can, and we expect the same of them. And they want that. They do give it their all, and the quality of the productions is first rate. That is especially impressive considering the daunting nature of the productions they seem to set their hearts to each year.

"We're always looking for a production that is going to challenge the students and get them really excited about it and get our audiences excited about it," shares Joe. "And we've been able to get a few productions in a row here that have done that. Les Mis is yet another big, epic production for us to take on. It's one of those beloved pieces. I think it's safe to say there are fanatics out there for this show, our performers included. We were slated to do Gypsy, but the rights for Les Mis came available. This was right around the time the film was released and there was a lot of positive buzz around it. That and we had talked for three years that one day we'd love to do this show.

With plans set for Gypsy, the team went to Paul Hemmer with the plan for changing direction. As a theater manager, he wanted to hesitate, but he was also fully supportive. If they felt this was the best decision, then Les Mis it would be.

"I can tell you it's an expensive darn show to do," Hemmer emphasized. "The performance rights for the show were about $3,000 more than any show we've ever done which is why we're doing one ticket price and one ticket price only, $20. We'll have a big orchestra in the pit and great sets. One of the big things that's been going the last two years, and we hope to get another year, is Mulgrew Oil and BP are funding our interns from DePaul University, Luther, Clarke and Loras, so we've had them helping to build the beautiful sets."

Joe Kleinbriel agreed, "We're going to have wonderful production elements. We don't have the million dollar budgets that Broadway has to stage these show. So we are finding our own interpretation of the show, to tell the same story, but to tell it in our way that will do it justice. That's a challenge, but we're meeting the challenge beautifully."

And at $20, this ticket is a no-brainer.

Paul Hemmer can't help but gush about the casts they pull together for these shows year in and year out, "There is nothing more exciting than live performance and to see the really talented young people get out there and literally throw themselves out in front of the people night after night... they have to do a quality job. Everyone in the cast is dependent on everyone else to do a quality job. There is no key performer. It's working together to make the whole. It's just exciting to see live theater and if you haven't done it before, you're really missing out on something."

Paul shared a great story as an example of the quality of productions. He included a great British accent, but the best I can do is summarize his quote... sorry. "We did Sweeney Todd last year. A lot of people are afraid of that show. We had an English gentleman come in off the street by chance and buy a ticket. He was a big fan of the show in general had seen it performed, I believe, about 15 times including productions in London and New York. Later that night he came up to me at intermission and he said this production was the equal of any of them." In ironic fashion, he called the show "bloody good."

What I learned in the interview was how difficult the process is before you even begin to work on building the show. Many people don't understand that you can't just pick a show and do it. Some shows are not available at all for production, some are limited, some rights are held up by touring shows. Sometimes they're so expensive you can't afford to stage it and sometimes you have to be invited to be one of the theaters to stage a show. And then, when you are selected, you have to pay for the rights upfront. So staging any production can be a very big investment and risk, but also may be a testament to your history of quality and success that the rights will be granted to you at all.

Live theater is still thriving in Dubuque and no doubt, is has much to do with the quality of the shows.

"We face big competition these days from movies and the casinos," offers Hemmer. "We have to do a bang up job on productions or people don't come. The quality is equal to anything you want to see anywhere, especially at the price."

Joe Kleinbriel also sees a strong presence for theater in Dubuque, even compared to other midwest markets. "I think we measure up great. There are great things happening here. It's a big little town. There's supportive competition in the area of people trying to do some quality work at more than one venue. There are actually a lot of great venues doing theater in the areas. We've got a gem at the Grand Opera House, and Paul has been wonderfully supporting and encouraging of us all the way through."

I realize I have not even talked about the show itself. I guess if you still have no idea what the basic story of Les Misérables is, then you've got bigger problems than we can address here, my friend. Needless to say, it's a wonderful journey of redemption featuring beautiful, memorable music like "On My Own," "Do You Hear the People Sing" and "I Dreamed a Dream" (yeah, the Susan Boyle song). There's a reason it's world famous and beloved by millions. Combine that with perhaps the most talented collective cast of the year in Dubuque, and the only thing that should be keeping you from putting down this issue of 365ink and getting your tickets now is finding out how to do just that. Hey look at that, it's all in the last paragraph. How convenient!

Tickets for the first ever full production of Les Misérables in Dubuque are $20 each for all seats and are on sale now at the Grand Opera House Box Office (M-F 10 a.m.-4 p.m.) online at www.thegrandoperahouse.com, or by phone, at 563-588-1305. Showtimes are Friday and Saturday, July 26-27 at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday, July 28 at 2 p.m. The next weekend the 7:30 showtimes start on Thursday and performances, again, run through the 2 p.m. Sunday performance.

Rock n Roll Rewind

A Benefit for Albrecht Acres

August 2-3

Is there anyone who doesn't love music? While favorites might span genres and generations, music serves as the soundtrack to our lives, a companion to all manner of memorable scenes that seem to replay in our minds whenever we hear that one particular song. There is no doubt that music is a force, for celebration and yes, recollection. It is in that spirit that a group of music lovers and musicians stage Rock n Roll Rewind, two days of music performed by reunited bands from the 1960s, '70s, and this year, the '80s.

Now in its fourth "official" year, Rock n Roll Rewind returns Friday, August 2 and Saturday, August 3. Hosted this year by the Diamond Jo Casino's Mississippi Moon Bar, Rewind will showcase the music of a dozen Tri-State area bands. In addition to return performances by several bands from Rewinds past, this year's event will feature first time reunions and more music by women, including a reunion of late '80s female-fronted hard rock band, Goldirox. As always, the event is a fundraising benefit for Camp Albrecht Acres.

The inspiration for Rock n Roll Rewind came about at a reunion party held by Anne Gindorff Heinz in her backyard at which a number of veteran musicians were in attendance. "A bunch of the old rock-n-roll bands got together and just decided to sit around and shoot the breeze and some people brought some photographs from the old bands," recalls Vaughn Kray, drummer for a number of Rewind bands.

Guitarist and vocalist Ralph Kluseman was entertaining the party with acoustic versions of a few classic songs from the era of those in attendance. "Well, that was a great day," recalls Kluseman. "I'd set up at the back of the house and Luis (Moscoso) was there and Vaughn Kray was there and we started talking about what it would be like to try to recreate the magic."

"Just to get the feeling that, 'Boy ... wouldn't we all just like to get back together and enjoy that feeling again?" said Kray. "Just play."

"So, that afternoon, with a little encouragement, people actually got up and started singing," said Kluseman (pictured at right), "and I said, 'Well, here's my guitar. Why don't you try a few songs?' It really was just a very simple, innocent decision to say, 'Okay, you know I would love to hear you because you're the music I listened to when I was growing up. You were always my role models. You were my heroes.' I was genuine and sincere about the fact that I wanted to hear what they sounded like and they shouldn't give up something that was so passionate."

"No matter how it sounded, we were just going to do it," said Kray. "It kind of evolved into that. We got in touch with a bunch of people and some of the bands that played a long time ago were able to get back together. My band Dark Side got together for the first time in over 40 years and this will be the fourth time we've played together. Dave Hummel's band Fifth Column is going to be back again, I think for the fourth time this year. Blissfield Blues Band, who has had a bunch of different incarnations - we are going to be playing again (with) a couple surprise vocalists."

Once set in motion, Rock n Roll Rewind seemed destined to be an annual event, finding its target audience and achieving incredible success, even in its first year. "Oh, it was just a thrill. It was just a thrill," recalls Kray. "We practiced really hard and when we got together on stage it was like, 'Wow, we probably should have done this the year before!' It was just a lot of fun and the people really enjoyed it. We came up with a good cause with Albrecht Acres to really have somebody to play for and it turns out we're doing good at the same time so it was a feel-good feeling."

For Kluseman, the first Rewind was an opportunity to see some of the bands that inspired him to become a musician. "You could feel the excitement in the room," he said. "Oh my goodness. The excitement was incredible all the way through. First of all, if you're wandering around and you have your heroes in the room and they're just there and they're just as approachable as anybody. There are no egos - you could just walk up and talk to them and say, 'Hey, I've listened to you for years.' And they were genuinely excited to hear how you felt about them. That's the part for me that was so nice. I carried around in my head all those years all those feelings, but to be able to finally express them and say, 'I really appreciate you. I really thought what you did was fabulous,' and see their reactions, that was payment enough for me."

In fact, it was his first time seeing The Natives - a band that reunited to perform at the first Rewind – that convinced Kluseman of his desire to learn how to play guitar. “My dad had taken me out to the Dubuque County Fair and said I could go over to the teen tent,” Kluseman recalls. “I walked into the teen tent – this was like 1969 – and The Natives were in there and they started playing ‘Sgt. Pepper’s Lonely Hearts Club Band.’ I was awestruck. I literally stopped in my tracks. My mouth just dropped open and I stood there mesmerized because these guys sounded LIKE THE BEATLES!” And I thought, ‘That’s what I want (to do).’” I’d already decided that I wanted to be a Beatle, but that carried me through because at that point in time, my parents weren’t going to let me go to concerts so these were the groups that I got to see. Like The Bands of Gold out in front of Kmart – they actually had a record that came out and they set up in front of Kmart – but this deal at the Fairgrounds was a huge deal for me.”

Rewind has also become an opportunity for Kray (pictured above in white, with his band, The Dark Side) to reunite with the bands of his younger days. “I just took a trip out to California to practice with my Butterscotch Grove band,” he reports. “We couldn’t get the whole band together out there but we recorded some tracks at David’s studio and put them up on the Soundcloud so our bass player can practice with them. We practiced and laid down probably about 12 or 13 tracks and hopefully, we can put it back together because that was the first time we’ve played in over 40 years. Randy Wilcox who performed in The Natives the year before last will be back with us, Dave Chalmers, Mike Hendrickson, and Drew Norman. That old band will be back together. It started that afternoon with people just sitting around and saying, ‘Wow, would that be a great idea? Try and get people back together?’ It kind of went on from there. But here we are four years into it.”

In its first three years, Rewind focused on bands of the 1960s and ‘70s but this year opened the invitation to area bands from the 1980s, a move that also opened the door to more participation by the “women of rock.” This year’s lineup will include a repeat performance by Gayle Grether, along with some “surprise” guest vocals (Janet Lieb perhaps?) in several bands, including a female vocalist with Renegade (Tim Griffin, Dick Griffin, and Kenny Nechvatal) who will be backing Harry Steve Maule.

But the most notable addition to the lineup resulting from the above-mentioned expansion would be ‘80s hard rock band Goldirox, fronted by female vocalists Laura McDonald and Julie DeVoss. “I was bartending in East Dubuque at the time that Laura was playing,” explained music lover and Rewind organizer Julie Griffin, “so I had to sneak out and run down for 15, 20 minutes and grab a shot and rock out to Goldirox. That was huge for me because we didn’t have a lot of local women up onstage doing rock-n-roll. So this is good. This is really special for me.”

“Yeah, back in the day, it was pretty much a guys’ thing,” admits Kray. “Yeah, it was,” agrees Griffin, “and growing up in a houseful of men that were musicians, I definitely felt that. So Laura and I grew appreciating people like Ruby Starr and that goes back to some really good times. You can see the influence in Laura when she performs. For me, it’s kind of like stepping back in time on many levels.”

“I find myself so many times, even in the bands I’m in now, I say, ‘Remember the old days when East Dubuque was really hopping?’” recalls Laura McDonald. “You know every night was a concert setting.” “And you could see several bands on the street every weekend,” adds Griffin.

“When I was in that band and there were so many other great bands at that time too – Snidely Whiplash, of course, Grand Slam – you felt like every time you played it was a major event,” said McDonald. “I still feel that way, I really do.”

“The bars were narrow and I think it had such an intimate crowd,” notes Griffin. “People were standing on bar tables.” “And then there was that whole head-banging thing,” adds McDonald, laughing. “That was in at the time so when you see a packed house ..."

"I'm starting to feel like a grandfather," interjects Kray, eliciting laughter from the group. "Holy mackerel!"

"When you see a packed house and every single one of them is banging their head – I guess that's what I'm trying to convey," explains McDonald. "I love going out and watching bands now and there are so many great bands now and I love the bands I'm in now, but back then it was a different vibe with the interactions. The whole place would be doing that, would be doing the head-banging. Not just a couple people sitting at the bar but the entire place and it was like that at every show."

Kray notes that his experience was different, not only because it was a different time but because the interaction with crowd varied from band to band. "Talking about the interaction between the band and the crowd, when we practiced in California, we sat down, taking a break ... trying to think, 'Did we ever play a song that people danced to?'" he recalls, "and in the Butterscotch Grove, most people sat cross-legged in front of the stage. Nobody danced!"

"Because they were just sitting back and taking it all in and appreciating it," suggested McDonald. "That's where the head-banging started because you guys were all going like this," added Griffin, rocking back and forth.

"I think that might have been nodding off," joked Kray. "It was just a different thing. Prior to that in the Dark Side and some of the other bands we played in, it was a pop band that people danced to. We played at after-game dances in high school gyms."

Head-banging versus dancing aside, McDonald explains how the Goldirox band lineup was finalized. "Julie DeVoss was a rhythm guitarist / female vocalist that I actually met one night at a bar called Triple T 2 – if anybody remembers that!" she recalls. "She was from Dodgeville, Wisconsin and I don't know if she had heard about our band (but) she approached me and said, 'You know, I'm looking for a band; would you ever be interested in having another girl?' And I thought that would be great. Oh man, we would really have the band! We got two girls, this is gonna be just it! You know, we'll be wearing the short skirts and all this good stuff."

"We never wore skirts," interjects Kray. "Let's get that straight."

"And don't forget the tons of 'Shaper Plus' (hairspray) and it cost like $10 a can!" added McDonald, laughing. "Julie approached us and I approached the guys about it and they were like, 'Definitely.' She actually plays in another group, BlackWater Gin right now which is just a phenomenal country rock band."

In addition to McDonald and DeVoss, Goldirox features Dave Hirsh on bass (now in Half-Fast), Ken Kizer on drums (now in Menace) and John Peters on guitar. "John Peters is just a phenomenal guitar player and he's been kind of out of the scene for a little bit so to me, out of everything, I can sincerely say this from the bottom of my heart, we gotta get John out playing again," said McDonald, "and this is going to put a fire under him to get out playing. He's so excited. He's so excited about it and I am so happy that he is going to get out here and do this. And if this gets him playing in another band, putting another band together ... if anybody knows John, he's one of the nicest guys you're ever going to meet. He's just a sweetheart and he's a great guitar player. He needs to get back out and do it again."

McDonald also reports that the Goldirox members had once talked about a reunion but it didn't work out at the time. "It's just great to put the Goldirox thing back together, because I think there's a resurgence of that music, too," she said. "This is a great time to do this."

"And the Rewind team is really excited to have to have younger blood into this because these guys are the generation that followed us and we want to continue the sound but us older people aren't going to be able to do it that much longer," adds Kray. "You know, God forbid we lose anybody else." "We've lost so many," adds Griffin.

"We have a big list. It's sad," notes Kray. "Like John Walachy (who played in Lavender Hill) he passed a month or two after he played (Rewind) last time."

"The whole story around that is very touching," adds Griffin. "It meant a lot to him and his family that he performed and it was such a meaningful experience. There was a letter and I think it was written by his son. It's a really touching letter of how they dealt with his passing and while he was in the hospital we got him a video as soon as we could so they could play it and they played 'Riding the Storm Out' while he was in the hospital. They felt that it helped him through that ... his passing. When you start talking about these kind of things and you experience this stuff going on and the effects of Rock and Roll Rewind, all the little headaches and the stuff it takes to get there, it really makes it worth it."

"I'd just like to thank you guys for all the work you do putting this whole thing together," said McDonald. "I think it's just one of the greatest things to come here. Now that I'm on the official Rewind (Facebook) page, I know the work that's involved. What you said Julie ... that it's all worth it when you see it come to fruition."

"You go through the crowd and you see people you haven't seen in 20 or 30 years," adds Kray. "Wow, what a feeling!"

"If anyone doesn't know, it's a lot of work for the people behind the scenes to put this show together," notes McDonald. "It takes a lot."

Kray replies, "It's a labor of love."

Rock n Roll Rewind will be held Friday, August 2 from 5 p.m. to midnight and Saturday, August 3 from 2 p.m. to 1 a.m. in the Mississippi Moon Bar at the Diamond Jo Casino. Tickets are $7 for Friday, $10 for Saturday, or $15 for both. Advanced tickets are available at Hartig Drug stores. All proceeds benefit Camp Albrecht Acres. Rock n Roll Rewind is sponsored by Hartig Drug, Diamond Jo Casino, American Trust and Savings Bank, Conlon Construction, Dubuque Auto Plaza, Super Hits 106.1, and Dubuque365. McCoy's 40K for 40 Years July Giveaway!

McCoy Goldsmith & Jeweler's '40k for 40 Years' celebration, aimed at giving back to the community that has kept the business active over the years, continues in July with two arts organizations going head to head to head in a Facebook competition for the most votes with the winner receiving custom crafted jewelry from McCoy Jeweler.

July's '40k for 40 Years' event competitors are Opening Doors and Honor Flight of Greater Dubuque. Both of these organizations present opportunities to those who may not have the means to seek the opportunity themselves, helping the individuals involved.

Opening Doors is the non-profit organization that operates Maria House and Teresa Shelter. Homeless women, alone or with children, come to us to help rebuild their lives. We provide goal setting and life skills training that will enable them to take care of themselves and achieve their full potential. Women are dependent when they come in...independent when they leave.

Since 2000, Maria House has provided transitional housing, where residents can stay for as long as two years. In 2006, we opened Teresa Shelter. It offers the same transitional housing, as well as short-term emergency shelter services.

Honor Flight Network is our way of paying a small tribute to those who gave so much—a memorable, safe, and rewarding Tour of Honor. Partnering with HonorAir in Hendersonville, North Carolina, we formed the "Honor Flight Network." Today, we continue working aggressively to expand our programs to other cities across the nation.

The piece for July is a 14k yellow gold round, twist pendant and it incorporates the month's birthstone, holding six 2x4mm marquise rubies and six 3mm round brilliant diamonds bezel set in an alternating fashion around pendant.

Voting begins Friday, July 19 and ends the following Friday, July 26. "Vote online @ www.mccoyjeweler.com or facebook.com/McCoyJeweler

NOW IN STOCK!

Dead Larry

The Lift, Fri day, July 19, 9 PM / $5

A delightful blend of high energy rock, dance and funk offers a look into the new generation of musicians and fans. Originally from Iowa City, IA the entire band relocated to Minneapolis, MN in Oct 2011. Dead Larry spreads a positive message to bring out a renewed feeling of passion and hope for anyone who listens. A group of 4 guys in their twenties, Dead Larry loves to party and encourages the crowd to get up and moving. With a vast range of influences it's hard to pin down the sound, but comparisons have been made to Modest Mouse, The Talking Heads, Led Zeppelin and Pink Floyd. Dead Larry encourages a community of friends and family (known as "The Family of Funky Friends") that continues to support and grow with Dead Larry throughout their adventures. Touring relentlessly across the country, Dead Larry is a force to be reckoned with.

LOT44

erone!, Friday, July 19, 10 PM

Lot44 is a rock band from Fayetteville, AR that combining heavy guitar riffs with thick modern rock tempos. Their music has been compared to the radio guitar rock of the 90s.

GYPSY LUMBERJACKS

erone!, Saturday, July 20, 10 PM

With a sound consisting of a mix of World Beat, Flamenco, Caribbean, Gypsy Jazz, and Bluegrass, Gypsy Lumberjacks cover a wide range of styles. Mining similar territory as the Dave Matthews Band or Cross Canadian Ragweed, the six-piece band layer pleasant sounding vocal harmonies over top sparse instrumentals that add up to one big jam set in firmly in motion. They'll be at Eronel on Saturday, July 20th. This is a free show starting at 10:00 with music all night.

Union Specific

The Lift, Saturday July 20, 9 pm / $5

Since the off chance meeting of singers, guitar players, Gregg Maher, and Tyler Wallace in Sherman TX in 2008, with the later addition of bass player Kim Taruc, and whatever drummer will have them for the evening, Union Specific has played over 200 shows in the past year alone. The now iconic Ford Expedition, christened "The Union Special", has logged hundreds of thousands of miles, as the band has toured nationally. Listen to the lyrics behind the steel guitar heavy, harmony droning, Gram Parsons, rock and roll, and one can pick out stories about faraway lands, some of which Union Specific has, in their own way, managed to make not seem like such the dreamlike distant destinations they once were.

Chastity Brown & Barbara Jean

erone!, Mon., July 22, 8:30 pm, Free

Chastity Brown and Barbara Jean each have a diverse spin on modern folk that complements each other. Chastity Brown infuses an acoustic blues sound with soulful gospel-tinged vocals that command the listener's attention. She has received accolades from a variety of critics, running the gamut from NPR to CMT. Barbara Jean is a multi-instrumentalist whose banjo and violin accentuate her lilting voice. A strong songwriter in the classic country tradition, she has been featured in No Depression and won the 2011 Big Top Chautauqua songwriting contest.

Hudson Falcons

The Lift, Tues July 23, 9 PM / FREE

The Hudson Falcons are a rock 'n' roll band taking their influences from all over, and then melding them into a straight ahead, aggressive form of rock 'n' roll. We've often been described as a cross between Stiff Little Fingers, the Devil Dogs, and Bruce Springsteen.

S.S. Webb, Twins, Split Pricks

erone!, Thurs, July 25, 10PM, Free

As punk as pirates get, SS Webb will be coming through town with nothing but a guitar and a washboard and sorrow from the sea. This special two-piece line-up is stripped down but powerful, able to drink as much as any full band. Also playing will be 7" friends Twins and Split Pricks, two unruly bands made of melody and noise.

The Melismatics

The Lift, Fri July 26, 9 PM / $5

The Melismatics music has been featured on MTV's "The Hills," "The City" and "Laguna Beach," NBC's "Windfall"; Animal Planet's "Jockeys" and they've played such notable events as Lollapalooza, Summerfest, and CMJ. The Melismatics released "The Acid Test" on CC Entertainment/E1 Music (2008). Renowned producer John Fields caught the band performing at 2007 SXSW in Austin, Texas and signed on to produce the album. The music video for "Digging Deep" charted at #2 on MTVU and received widespread airplay. The Melismatics' new album "MANIA!" was produced by Jon Auer of The Posies and Big Star with an all-star studio team.

Acoustic Guillotine, The Hot Moms

erone!, Saturday, July 27, 10PM, Free

With pummeling rhythms and a single, monolithic bass driving everything along, Acoustic Guillotine are hardly acoustic and mostly a guillotine. Their sound is the product of years of subversive music added up, an amalgamation of weight and counterculture. Also playing will be the Hot Moms, a band built of a garage aesthetic and a radio idea, a wonderful blend of loose lips and sunk ships, hooks and hangovers for days and days.

Dax Riggs, Brooks Strause

erone!, Wednesday, July 31, 9PM, 21+

Louisiana's own dark star of the underground, Dax Riggs has done far more than just build a reputation for his soulful vocals and the terrifying imagery he summons with them. Revered by those that've already discovered him, his music is an alchemy of all roots music, doom metal and glam-punk poetry. Tripping over tombstones and reaching into the atmosphere to pull spirits from the air, his music sounds like voodoo, feels like redemption and puts off heat like a burning oil rig. Slipping through Dubuque with Dax is Iowa native Brooks Strause. With songs that are as much an invitation to collectively meditate on the darker sides of the human condition as they are pure enjoyment to take in, Brooks' performances always leave a permanent impression.

The Horde, Dredge

The Lift, Fri Aug 2, 9 PM / $5

Unleashed in 2008, "From Empire to Ashes" consisted of 6 epic, metal classics that took the listener on a journey into dark forbidden realms and all the way to the hallowed gates of Valhalla. Songs of bravery in battle, demonic warriors, clan warfare, and bewitchment that would inspire any true warrior on the fields of battle. Since 2008, Dredge have been hitting the Midwest hard with progressive metal, blood curdling screams, and pummeling rhythms. They recently inked arecord deal with the mighty Abyss Records for their 3rd release due late next year in 2013...

Peter Frampton is an English musician, singer, songwriter, producer, guitarist and multi-instrumentalist. Frampton has been associated with the bands Humble Pie and The Herd but earned international stardom with his solo breakthrough album Frampton Comes Alive! Frampton is best known for such hits as "Breaking All The Rules," "Show Me the Way," "Baby, I Love Your Way," "Do You Feel Like We Do," and "I'm In You," which remain staples on classic-rock radio stations. Frampton Comes Alive! was on the Billboard 200 for 97 weeks, of which 55 were in the top 40, and of which 10 were at the top. The album was the top selling album of 1976 and it was also the fourteenth best seller of 1977. With sales of six million copies it became the biggest selling live album and has been certified as six times platinum.

Steve Lukather is an American guitarist, singer, songwriter, arranger and record producer, best known for his work with the rock band Toto. Lukather was the original lead guitarist for Toto, serving in that capacity for the band's entire history, as well as a lead and backing vocalist and composer. Lukather has been nominated for twelve Grammy awards, and has won five.

Rick Derringer scored his first hit, "Hang on Sloopy" with the McCoy's and also recorded the rock anthem "Rock N' Roll Hoochie Koo" It doesn't get any more classic than that!

Weber Meats

by Rich Belmont

During these summer months we often discover some of the best dining places are on our own decks and patios. We invite friends and family over as we fire up our BBQ grills and smokers.

We take full advantage of living in an area where there is an abundance of ultra fresh produce. It's all around us at the local farmers markets, the Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) Farms, Fincel's Sweet Corn and The Food Store.

Then too we are so fortunate to have a real old fashioned butcher shop just a few miles away. Otto Weber opened Weber Meats in 1905 in Belleville, WI. He brought with him from Switzerland the expertise he learned in the family meat business and recipes that had been with his family for generations.

After many years the shop was moved to Cuba City, WI where it remains to this day. It is now operated by Dan and Tracy Weber. Dan is the fourth generation Weber to run the business. He and Tracy continue the traditions and skills of selling quality cured meats, sausages, ham and bacon established by his Great Grandfather and continued by his Grandfather, Father and Uncles.

Dan has been in the meat business his whole life. He likes to say being a butcher is all he knows. And obviously he knows a lot. He has been awarded well over 200 State and National Championships for his meat products. There are so many Champion and Reserve Grand Champion Awards there is no room to exhibit them in his store. Dan was inducted into the Cured Meats Hall of Fame on July 14, 2007 at the Association of Meat Processors Convention in Milwaukee, WI.

Now obviously, it is not because of awards people have been coming to Weber Meats for 108 years! Customers from 3 states come in droves and line up to buy meat for their next BBQ or to load up their freezers. Some of the patrons are 3 generations of the same family.

So I asked Dan why so many of his customers travel great distances to Cuba City instead of just buying meat in the super market. His answer was quite interesting. First of all, Weber Meats is not a grocery store, it's a meat store! The staff knows where the meat is produced. They know all their suppliers personally and they know how the animals are raised. Secondly, the same family has operated this business for over a century and there is nothing about meat they don't know. And thirdly, and Dan could not stress this enough, the entire Weber staff is totally dedicated and extremely knowledgeable. They are all masters of their trade. Several Weber Meat employees have been with the company ranging from 15 to 39 years. In fact, the four oldest employees have a combined 120 years of meat cutting experience!

For these reasons many of the area restaurants rely on Weber for all their specialty meats. Some of the big sellers are steaks and chops, beef and pork tenderloins, ground beef, sausages, beef and pork roasts and ribs, and chickens.

All the beef is USDA Choice Grade. It is wet aged from 14 to 28 days. I recently grilled some T-Bone Steaks and some bacon wrapped sirloins. The meat was so flavorful I quickly ascertained it didn't even require seasoning.

On another night I put some of Weber's signature marinated pork chops on the grill. The specially prepared homemade marinade imparted a delightful and distinctive taste.

Weber Meat's is also a meat processing company. This is why you will always find a number of specialty products available. One example is Dan's own creation called Ham for Two. This is a sirloin tip of ham just the right size for four to six people. (Or two if you are a ham lover like me!) Another example is the tremendous assortment of cured bacons. There are at least 8 of them including hickory smoked, maple, pepper, applewood, Canadian, cottage and nitrite-free. There are also a number of flavored hamburger patties. You might find Bacon & Cheddar; Pepperjack; Jalapeño & Cheddar; Mushroom & Swiss; or Pizza burgers.

The Weber people are also talented and expert sausage makers. You will usually find rope, summer, seasoned, hot and mild Italian links, kalberwurst, and salami just to name a few. There are also approximately 25 different flavors of Bratwurst! These include Traditional German, Swiss, Beer, Philadelphia Cheese, Hawaiian, Kraut & Onion, Beef, Mushroom & Swiss just to name a few. Some of the more unusual brats are Badger (red bell peppers & Swiss cheese), Packer (green bell peppers & cheddar cheese) and Tailgater (beer with onions).

On a couple of recent visits I noticed many customers were either calling in or appearing in person to order sides of beef or pork. Half sides and quarter sides are available. You can pick and choose all of the cuts of meat you want and you are able to customize your entire order so you only receive the meat you desire. Of course you have more options when you order a half side: for example, there are approximately 18 T-Bone Steaks (including Porterhouse and Club Steaks) or you can have the bone removed and get New York Strips and Fillets. You also receive about 14 Ribeye Steaks that are boneless. Or you can choose to have the bone left in for Rib-Steaks. Your order will also include about 3 Arm, 8 Chuck and 4 Rump roasts. There is also about 24 pounds of Round Steak or you can have some of this tenderized and made into Cubed Steaks. A typical side includes about 65 pounds of ground beef divided into 1 or 2 pound packages or into quarter-pound patties as well. There is also about 6 pounds of Stew Meat, 6 Soup Bones, and 4 Short Ribs you can keep as is or have processed into more ground beef. All these different options are explained on the Weber Meats website processing page.

As I mentioned earlier, Weber Meats is a meat processing center and it is clean and modern despite being a 108 year old business. When you visit you are invited to put on a hat and tour the plant if you are interested. And while you are there if you do not see a particular meat you need the staff will be happy to cut it for you. I recently asked for suggestions on smoking some pork and was advised to try pork shoulders liberally coated with Weber Seasonings. The resulting pulled pork sandwiches were quite sumptuous.

Weber's is a delicatessen too. There is usually coleslaw, potato and macaroni salad in the display case. You can choose from a number of cheeses including Block Colby, Mild Swiss, Medium Swiss, Baby Swiss, Cheddar, Cojack, Pepper and Muenster. Deli meats include roast beef, salami, corn beef, deli ham, honey loaf, jellied roast beef loaf, smoked ham and liverwurst. You will notice all the deli meats, also known as luncheon meats, and cold cuts where I come from, are never pre-sliced. It has always been my contention pre-slicing deli meats dries them out even if the slices are encased in plastic wrap. I always ask for my cold cuts to be sliced "paper thin." In my opinion thin slices bring out more flavors. On the other hand you might prefer thick slabs in your sandwiches so you get more of a bite. Obviously this is a personal preference so I recommend you always ask your server to show you the first slice. Then you can tell him to make the rest of your slices thicker or thinner until he gets them to the thickness you like.

For those of you looking for a new supplier of flash frozen seafood you should know Weber Meats has a nice selection. There are cod fillets, sunfish, catfish, salmon, yellowfin tuna, tilapia and walleye just to name a few.

So the next time you are planning a back yard feast take a ride out to Weber Meats of Cuba City. It's only 18 and a half miles and about a half-hour drive from Dubuque. Cross the Dubuque-Wisconsin Bridge, take Exit 1 onto Route 11 East and then turn left onto Route 80 North. It's at the North end of Cuba City; you can't miss it, especially when you are hungry!

MOVIE BUZZ

Tom Hanks, director Ron Howard, and writer David Koepp have all reportedly agreed to return for Dan Brown's Inferno, which sees Hanks' symbologist, Robert Langdon, finding clues and puzzles hidden this time in the writings of Dante. This means they're skipping the Lost Symbol, the third novel in the series. It had previously been in production with Ron Howard stepping back to produce. I guess they like the new book that much better. The first two grossed about 1.3 billion for Sony Pictures. And it is, after all, Tom Hanks. We'll watch him mow grass if they put it on film, cause he's Tom Hanks!

All You Need Is Kill, Tom Cruise's latest

sci-fi film is getting a new name, Edge of Tomorrow. So there's that.

Chiwetel Ejiofor, Michael Fassbender, Benedict Cumberbatch, Brad Pitt, Michael K. Williams, Paul Giamatti--is this for real? Like Tarantino last year, Shame director Steve McQueen has lined up a hugely impressive, Basterd-filled lineup for his tackling of the subject, 12 Years a Slave.

Kevin Costner is finally returning to leading man status with Universal's Midnight Delivery. The Guillermo del Toro produced and conceived film about a father who, in order to save his son's life, becomes a drug mule. Costner is already following up his fatherly Man of Steel role with roles in Draft Day, an assassin thriller and two Tom Clancy films.

Marvel supposedly is looking at Joseph Gordon-Levitt to enter their so-called "Phase 3" of films as the magical Doctor Strange.

Mineral Points Gallery Nights August 3, December 7

Now in it's thirteenth year, Mineral Point galleries are open until 9 pm on the first Saturdays in April, June, August and December. You will always find a remarkable assortment of fine art and quality hand-made craft: ceramics, collage, furniture, glass, jewelry, painting, photography, printmaking, sculpture, fiber, and woodworking – much of it made right in town. Most of the galleries are located in the downtown business district filled with historic architecture, delicious dining venues, and engaging gallery owners. Walking from gallery to gallery on these evenings is one of the best ways to enjoy Mineral Point. A Map identifying the participating galleries and restaurants will be available at most galleries. David Church Saturday, August 17, 7:30 p.m. The Grand Opera House

David Church has found success despite all odds. He is outside the box, of what Nashville defines as 'marketable material'. Amazingly, without a major hit on mainstream radio or even a record label, Church has millions of fans all over the world. Church has been featured on RFDTV's popular show, "Midwest Country" for over five years. His popularity throughout the US, Canada, and now Europe continues to soar as he makes regular appearances on the show and tours throughout the world. David has been featured in numerous major country music magazines including, Country Weekly, Country Music Report, Nashville, Music Guide, Dreamwest, The Tub, Indie Islands, and many others. You can see what all the praise is about when he brings the show to the Grand Opera House on Saturday, August 17th at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $25 and available online at www.thegrandoperahouse.com.

Why Choose Organic?

Choosing organic is clearly better for the environment. This is demonstrable and occurs through numerous channels, including conservation of natural resources and less pollution for our water and soils.

Consuming organic foods reduces the body's exposure to pesticides. This has been confirmed through numerous scientific studies. Adults and children who consume organic foods have measurably lower levels of pesticides in their bodies.

For children there are two additional caveats to consider on the safety front. Because children consume more food calories per unit of body weight and because their cells are dividing at a much more rapid rate, they are at greater risk for potential toxic effects from pesticide exposure (a developing fetus is at the greatest risk). Additionally, it is common for some kids to have very restrictive eating patterns with consumption of only one or a few types of fruits or vegetables on a regular basis. If this is the case, they will experience a greater number of exposures to the same pesticides which can also exacerbate risk.

The Environmental Working Group (EWG), a not-for-profit research organization devoted to improving public health and the environment, has determined that the produce that consistently has the highest pesticide levels include: apples, bell peppers, celery, cherries, grapes (imported), nectarines, peaches, pears, potatoes, red raspberries, strawberries, and spinach. Choosing organic for this group of produce will give you and your family the greatest reduction in pesticide exposure. Spinach, strawberries, and celery are the worst of the bunch. (I only buy organic in these 3 varieties of notoriously pesticide laden foods.)

On the down side, organic foods are more expensive. You will generally pay about 20% more for organic varieties. Organic foods will also generally spoil more quickly. Pesticides clearly extend the shelf life and "freshness" of foods, but at what cost?

The Dirty Dozen (or 13)

According to the Environmental Working Group (EWG), the following forms of produce provide the highest pesticide loads. It will be best for your health to buy the organic versions of these fruits and vegetables.

Apples • Celery • Sweet Bell Peppers • Peaches • Strawberries • Spinach • Nectarines (imported) • Grapes • Green Beans • Lettuce • Cucumbers • Blueberries (domestic) • Potatoes.

Safe Choices

These 15 forms of produce are so low in pesticides that conventional should be just fine:

Onions • Sweet Corn • Pineapples • Avocado • Cabbage • Sweet Peas • Asparagus • Mangos • Eggplant • Kiwi • Cantaloupe (domestic) • Sweet Potatoes • Grapefruit • Watermelon • Mushrooms

Move over, Steve!

Do it yourself advice from a new mom who knows how...

Summer Heat!

Well folks, the summer heat has finally come! While it is perfectly okay to be planting this time of year, it's safe to say that it can take a toll on both you and the plant if your not careful. Here are some ways to keep cool this summer in the garden:

Mulch! Nothing helps retain existing moisture levels like mulch can. There are many different options of materials all ultimately doing the same thing- helping to keep the soil cool. If you haven't already mulched your garden now is the time. In a vegetable garden consider straw from a reputable source or leaf clippings from a lawn that is chemical free. Around your trees and shrubs I like double ground wood mulch, preferably in a dark brown tone.

Water early. In order to not completely waste water through evaporation, I encourage you to water your gardens early in the morning and ideally through the use of soaker hoses. These hoses sweat water right at the base of the plant, slowly allowing it to absorb. Watering early in the day also prevents scalding to the foliage due to water droplets sitting on the leaves ultimately boiling them. I also encourage my kiddos to play in the sprinkler vs. a swimming pool. That way they can cool down, have a great time and I can water my yard, all at the same time!

Consider shade cloth in a vegetable garden. Many vegetables can benefit from a little shade during the summer heat. Consider using shade cloth or even landscape fabric to screen some of the sun's intense heat.

Mow less! You didn't want to be sitting on that hot mower anyway, did you?! Mow less or mow at a height of at least 3" if not greater and the shade from the leaf blades will help prevent your lawn from drying up and burning out.

Add a water feature. That is the landscape designer in me coming out... nothing (besides shade!) helps you enjoy your garden in the hot summer sun like a water features sound can. Add a concrete fountain or a pondless waterfall and enjoy the soothing sound of water when you crave it most!

Consider a shade structure. If you are like many of my clients and lack shade in your garden, consider adding a structure like a pergola or a sun sail to your yard to create a shady cool area to enjoy.

These are becoming more and more available and can not only be functional but also add a fun element to your garden's style.

Want more ideas on how to spend more quality time in your outdoor space? I'd love to share my thoughts. Call me to set up a landscape consultation or garden coaching session at 563.690.1500 or email me at sara.selchert@stevesace.com.

Preserve Fresh Herbs

with nutritionists
Megan Horstman & Amber Jaeger

July is National Ice Cream Month. Kids of all ages love ice cream! After all, what's not to love? It's creamy, sweet and delicious. Ice cream is a favorite summertime treat. We know it may contain extra calories from fat and sugar so we want to watch portions for good health and to be able to fit into our summer wardrobe!

One strategy is to eat upside-down sundaes by making fruit the base of your sundae. Fruit is a great dessert option for summer sweet treats. It is refreshing, nutritious and lower in calories than many other choices. Instead of filling a large dish of ice cream TOPPED by a handful of strawberries, enjoy a bowl of berries capped with a small scoop (about 1/2 cup) of ice cream.

ONE cup of strawberries provides about 50 calories and a generous amount of fiber, folate, potassium, vitamin C and antioxidants. A half-cup of a light ice cream adds about 100 calories, as well as calcium.

Or, substitute ONE sliced medium-sized peach (2-1/2-inch diameter) for the strawberries for about 40 calories. (Source of calorie information: USDA National Nutrient Database per UNL Extension in Lancaster County). With a total of around 150 calories for the fruit plus ice cream, your taste buds AND your waistline can be happy!

Here are two fabulous ice cream recipes with a healthy twist for you to enjoy this summer – including a dairy-free, gluten-free option that is absolutely amazing! Who says you can't have your dessert and eat it, too?

Grilled Peach Sundaes

Makes: 2 servings

Active time: 10 minutes | Total: 25 minutes

Fruit on the grill? Most definitely! Try grilling other stone fruit or pineapple too!

All you need:

- 2 peaches, halved and pitted
- 1 teaspoon canola oil
- 2 scoops nonfat vanilla frozen yogurt or fruit sorbet
- 1 tbsp. toasted unsweetened coconut.

All you do:

1. Preheat grill to high. Brush peach halves with oil. Grill until tender.
2. Place 2 peach halves in each bowl and top with a scoop of frozen yogurt (or sorbet) and coconut.

Per serving: 154 calories; 4 g fat (2 g sat, 2 g mono); 0 mg cholesterol; 28 g carbohydrate; 19 g added sugars. Source: www.eatingwell.com.

Chocolate Coconut Ice Cream

(gluten-free, dairy-free, vegan)

Makes about 5 servings, 1/2 cup each

All you need:

- 2 tablespoons raw cacao powder
- 1 (13.65 fl. oz.) can coconut milk (not lite)
- 1/3 cup agave nectar
- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla
- 1/4 teaspoon sea salt
- Rock salt and ice for ice cream maker
- Toppings as desired – nuts, unsweetened coconut, fruit

All you do:

1. Whisk cacao powder in a small amount of coconut milk. Add remaining coconut milk, agave nectar and vanilla and combine.
2. Pour mixture into an ice cream maker and prepare according to mfg. instructions.
3. Serve with assorted toppings and enjoy.

Tom Nakashima: Nature Morte
August 10 – November 10, 2013
Members Preview Reception:
Friday, August 9, 5:30-7:30 p.m.
Dubuque Museum of Art

Marvel at the scale and get lost in the details of works by Tom Nakashima in the newest exhibition at Dubuque Museum of Art. Using printmaking, painting, collage, and drawing accompanied by sculpture and video, Tom Nakashima brings works of unprecedented scale to the museum of art, the largest being almost 10 feet high by 30 feet wide. The exhibition, titled Nature Morte, presents 10 of Nakashima's works inspired by treepiles.

Treepiles, large mounds of trees and brush, are a common but often overlooked site on the landscape. These man-made forms signify a change in the landscape either planned or unplanned. After periods of flooding or wild fires, treepiles are signs of clean-up. Farmers and other land owners clear their land for a variety of reasons such as to increase space for livestock or crops or to develop land for commercial or residential building. It was the shape of a treepile that attracted the observant eye of Nakashima but it was the significance and symbolism behind treepiles that inspired this artist to incorporate the form into his artwork.

Nakashima is an internationally renowned artist who grew up in Dubuque. After receiving his undergraduate degree from Loras College, he went on to graduate school at the University of Notre Dame. In addition to being a full-time professional artist in Augusta, Georgia, Nakashima is currently the William S. Morris Scholar in Art Emeritus at Georgia Regents University in Augusta and Professor Emeritus at The Catholic University a commissioned portrait artist while living in Lake George, New York and spent time on two humanitarian missions to Africa, which inspired her Congo series of portraits. She and her husband now reside in Dubuque. Her website is: www.heatherloneil.com. The show will also be part of the Members-Only Preview Reception will be held Friday, August 9 from 5:30-7:30pm.

of America in Washington, D.C.

A Members Preview Reception will be held Friday, August 9, 2013 from 5:30-7:30 PM. Anyone that is not a museum member but would like to attend the reception can sign-up for a membership at the door. The exhibition opens to the public on Saturday, August 10th at 1:00 PM.

Learn more about Tom Nakashima and his artwork during his lecture at the museum on Sunday, August 11th at 1:30 PM. Admission is free for the lecture.

Monochrome: Pastel Works by Heather O'Neil

July 19 – October 27
Dubuque Museum of Art
Sponsored by Cottingham & Butler
Twelve luminous portraits by emerging Dubuque artist, Heather O'Neil, are on view beginning July 19, 2013 in Dubuque Museum of Art's McNamer Gallery. O'Neil is a realist artist who specializes in pastel portraits. The clarity and deceptive simplicity of her portraits is refreshing. A self taught artist, O'Neil persevered through years of dedication to her training, developing a masterful technical ability coupled with an acute sense of composition and beauty. Originally from Dubuque, O'Neil graduated from Hempstead High School in 1994. She worked as

Odds and Ends

By Bob Gelms

VINCE FLYNN RIP

Vince Flynn was the consummate writer of political thrillers. His running character, Mitch Rapp, has become almost an icon in the genre. Mr. Flynn died on June 19 after a three year battle with prostate cancer. He was 48. He is survived by his wife Lysa and three children who live in St. Paul Minnesota.

Transfer of Power is Mr. Flynn's second published novel and hit the bookstores in 1999. It is where the reader meets the super CIA agent Mitch Rapp for the first time. If you have the Movie Olympus Has Fallen you will get the eerie feeling that they made a version of Transfer of Power with a few Hollywood changes. Just recently another movie, White House Down, bears a resemblance to Transfer Of Power.

Transfer of Power is a great political thriller that you will think has an impossible idea at its center. By the time you finish the book the idea that the White House could be taken over by terrorists seem all to frighteningly possible. Mitch Rapp is in Iran on a job when he gets intel of a terrorist plot against the USA. Meanwhile back in Washington D.C. The terrorist have invaded the White House through a secret door (whether such a door really exists is problematic and frankly by this point you probably won't care). Rapp is tasked to infiltrate the White House, save the President who holed up in a bunked under the building, and exact retribution on the terrorists. It moves along like an elegant freight train to a logical conclusion but the story is how Mitch Rapp gets there. It you have never read Vince Flynn then Transfer Of Power is a grand place to start.

ANALIZE THIS

Tuesday of this week was the 62 anniversary of the publication of The Cather in the Rye and something very interesting has happened. Here is an excerpt from the news story. "This classic tale of Holden Caulfield, told from the point of view of the protagonist as he looks back on some of his adventures while confined in a psychiatric hospital with an unnamed diagnosis, has sold more than 60 million copies worldwide, and continues to be a high school favorite. The reclusive author Salinger died in 2010.

As part of a HuffPost Book Club discussion on the book that took place last year, Matthew Erlich, MD, a psychiatrist-researcher at the New York State Psychiatric Institute in the Division of Mental Health Services, told us that Caulfield would probably have been committed to a secure unit as a manic depressive at the time of the book." He goes on to say in a video that Holden presents some very unique challenges for a Psychoanalyst. In a modern setting Holden would be diagnosed with dangerous depression and Borderline Personality Disorder. No kidding. Now that I know that and since I thought Salinger was telling my story when I was in High School I guess I'm relieved I wasn't ensconced on the Fifth floor over at Little Company of Mary Hospital. You know, the floor where the locks are on the outside of the doors.

THE MYSTERIOUS MR. GALBRAITH

A little while ago Robert Galbraith published a detective novel called The Cuckoo's Calling. It was published to rave reviews and garnered the praise of none other than the superb, high profile, British/Scottish writer Val McDermid. It didn't seem to bother anyone that the book only sold about 450 copies in Briton and about 1500 worldwide. Until an enterprising writer for the Sunday Times noticed some interesting similarities with another British writers work. I suppose the Times pursued it because they thought they had a big plagiarism story on their hands. Well, on Sunday the Sunday Times broke the story that the Cuckoo's Calling was written not by Robert Galbraith who has a very believable biography but by none other than J. K. Rowling of Harry Potter fame. Within ONE day it shot to number one on Amazon.com and the publisher has ordered a second printing of a gigabazillion copies. It sure is good to be J. K. Rowling.

Jump, I'll Catch You

by matt booth

One of the endearing attitudes of children is their trust. Children have remarkable trust. It is this trust that enables a child to have fun and be assured that care is present and forthcoming. It simply amazes me that my one and a half year old, Graham, will jump off the side of the pool into my arms even though he can't swim. That kid will jump off of just about anything into my arms not worrying in the slightest that I might not catch him.

What an awesome responsibility and privilege to have someone trust me like that. If I just hold out my arms and say, "Jump, I'll catch you," he jumps with no worries, no fear, just a huge smile on his face. I knew I would catch him, but how does he know that? I assume he will trust me because I know that I'll be there for him. After all, I provide him food, shelter, and a loving home. But how does he know he can trust me?

Children simply trust. Graham never stops to think maybe Dad will not catch me this time; he has complete trust that he will be caught. Just the other day, he climbed up on the kitchen table and jumped off toward me. He just knows that I will not let him fall. He even jumps when my arms of full of something else. He doesn't pretend to feel one way, when he feels another. Children like to please those they love, enjoying the pleasure of those who care for them.

I'll never forget how little Graham will jump again and again into Daddy's arms, laughing, giggling and squealing without worry, fear or doubt. Graham does not consider that I might not be ready to catch him. He just jumps. This child trust will continue probably until the day I don't catch him. I hope that day is a long, long time down the road. I also hope that when that day comes, maybe he'll just be too big for me to catch. I hope I don't drop him because I was watching the game, checking my email or texting someone.

Suppose that it is you on the edge of the pool and you don't know how to swim. Would you be willing to jump base only on trust?

Potluck Paranoia

by pam kress-dunn

I have nothing against potlucks. The idea of having everybody contribute to a meal is a nice, generous idea. Think of the poor hostess, peeling potatoes, boiling peas, zesting lemons, toasting hazelnuts. It's enough to send a poor woman to bed, just as the guests are arriving, empty-handed.

So it can be a Good Thing, as Martha Stewart might put it, to have a collaborative meal. Still, I have a few concerns about potlucking.

First of all, how directive can the hostess be? (Or, okay, the host.) I remember a "Sesame Street" skit in which a king decides to have a picnic, and invites all of his minions to bring a dish. On their first attempt, everyone brings potato salad. Sigh. I love potato salad, and I know how hard it is to construct, but still, more than three kinds is too much.

So the king issues a "no potato salad" edict. He even mentions that he would have enjoyed some watermelon. You know what's coming, right? On the second go-round, everybody brings a . . . watermelon. The king is beside himself. What to do? Then, as so often happens in fairy tales, a young child steps up to make a suggestion. "The emperor has no clothes!" he shouts. Er – nope, wrong fairy tale. No, what this brilliant child suggests is, "Why don't you PLAN your picnic?" I should mention here that this is a small kingdom, so it's not that difficult a task.

The king is delighted. He begins singing. Pointing at one serf, he croons, "You bring the fruit salad!" and all the minions answer, "You got it, King!" Then, "You bring the ice cream!" "You got it, King!" "You bring the whipped cream!" "You got it, King!" And so on. And they ate happily after.

I agree with that kid. The hostess can make helpful suggestions – "Your biscuits are so good, why don't you bring a dozen of those?" – or be more general – "Would you like to bring a salad, or dessert?" It's nice to have a choice.

So I chose salad, on my last potluck event. Fine; I've got scads of recipes for salad. Fruit, kale, rice, pasta, Greek, Israeli, Mexican, potato. I've grown tired of the potato salad from the grocery store, so I decide on that.

But I'm caught up short when that "Sesame Street" scenario comes to mind. What if three other people volunteer for salad, and all of us decide on potato? That would be a disaster! I look through my bulging file of salad recipes, and pull out a few of my cookbooks, which fill an entire case in our kitchen. (This doesn't mean I'm a great cook. It means I love to read them while I eat Sal-tines and cheese.)

One by one, I go through the ritual. First, I think, "Oh! This sounds terrific!" Then, I remember somebody, some time, not liking whatever it was I brought to a potluck. Finally, I turn back to the potato salad, because everybody likes potato salad, right? It's even vegetarian, though not vegan, not with the mayo and the hard boiled eggs.

This brings back a particularly memorable moment from my hostessing past. My husband was having some colleagues over, and I took a few hours off work in order to eat with them the meal I'd made the night before. I knew at least two of the attendees were vegetarian, so I made my fabulous Spicy Vegetarian Chili, which is packed with beans and chickpeas and peppers and really good chili powder. I've made it a million times, and it's always a hit.

But as I was ladling it out, one of the guests, a young vegetarian I'll call Katie, piped up. "But I don't like vegetables!" she whined.

Really. Oh, the things I thought of saying. "All right, Katie, I'm going to make you a peanut butter and jelly sandwich, just like I used to when my picky kids refused to eat what I was serving." Or: "What part of 'I'm a vegetarian' don't you understand?" Or even: "Katie, didn't your mom teach you anything about manners?"

But I did not. I simply smiled and served the rest of our guests. Katie could live on cornbread, for all I cared.

I once attended a potluck at someone else's house, and one of the fellow guests, it fascinating that she felt this way. She was from the East coast. Maybe New Yorkers don't do potlucks. Maybe it's a modest Midwestern thing.

And maybe it's all about control. If you do the invitations, set the table, plan the menu, do all the cooking, and serve it with Great Grandma's sterling silver flatware, well, everything is your choice. I've done that, making the whole meal myself, and usually it turned out just great, especially if I could prepare most of it the day before. One time, in fact, a grateful guest exclaimed, as I brought out my two (!) perfectly composed salads, "We should eat like this all the time!"

I was pleased, but tired. After all, I'm not running a restaurant, and neither are my friends. So these days, if I feel like bringing a cherry pie, I call ahead and ask if anybody else had that idea.

If not, great. If so, it's back to files and cookbooks. And whatever I bring, I just assume everyone in my kingdom will love it.

TRIXIE KITSCH

BAD ADVICE FOR THE STUPID

Dear Trixie:

For the past 6 years or so, I have found myself stuck in a loveless marriage. For a long time, we hadn't been as intimate as I would like and eventually my wife told me that she had no interest in sex any longer. She told me directly that she didn't feel 'that way' about me anymore and even said that we were too old for sex. Trixie, we're only 37! Shortly after that, she moved out of the master bedroom and now shares a room with our 2 daughters.

I have begged her to go to counseling with me. I have politely and gently asked to speak to her doctor, in case there was a medical reason for her lack of libido, but she has refused. She says it's none of my business. I beg to differ.

The situation has been very stressful for me and I have dealt with periods of anger and bitterness, as well as bouts of depression. As you might imagine, my first thought was that if she didn't want me, she must have someone else. However, I haven't seen any strong indicators that might support the idea. She almost never speaks to me anymore and gets up before me and goes to bed before me. She is secretive and even takes her phone into the bathroom with her when she takes a bath. She also has been spending money on a new credit card account but the bills mysteriously become shredded before I can see them. She has joined a gym and has become very tanned toned. It's all so confusing!

At this point, I need to know the truth. Without concrete evidence, I don't want to make a confrontation, especially with the kids around.

So how do I find out for certain if she is indeed cheating? I can't afford a private investigator. I need to know if my marriage is kaput. Help!

- Distrustful Dad

Dear Dad:

You could get out a roll of scotch tape and your strongest reading glasses and start putting together those shredded bills--or--you could read your letter a second time and highlight the following words and phrases: *loveless *secretive *no interest in sex * none of my business * moved out *anger * bitterness * depression Is your marriage over? Yes it is--for longer than you knew.

Dear Trixie:

My husband left me and I was so depressed I couldn't do my job properly. I can't stop thinking about why he dumped me. I can't seem to do anything right. Today I got fired. I am going to lose my house and everything in it. I am doomed. I am nothing but a big fat loser. I doubt I will ever be successful at anything ever again.

- Disparaged in DBQ

Dear Disparafed in DBQ:

No, you are wrong. There is still plenty of time for you to become a successful alcoholic.

Dr. Ric Cracken's HORROR-SCOPES

Aries 3/21-4/19

You'll soon find yourself in the awkward time period between not wanting to have pants on, and having to wait for the pizza guy.

Taurus 4/20-5/20

As a massive conspiracy theorist, you're pretty sure that your Tupperware lids and single socks are chilling somewhere right now, laughing at you.

Gemini 5/21-6/21

Happiness is using an ATM and finding a receipt left by someone with an account balance lower than yours.

Cancer 6/22-7/22

You'll never meet a group of people more worried about their "privacy" than the Facebookers who that share EVERYTHING about themselves and how wrong you're living your my life.

Leo 7/23-8/22

You consistently find that you hate waking up hungover, eyebrow shaved and a penis drawn on your face... especially when you were drinking alone last night.

Virgo 8/23-9/22

It just struck you that the whip mask and handcuffs you found in your mom's room as a kid probably did not, if fact, make her a superhero.

Libra 9/23-10/22

Romney spent $800 million dollars to not be President. You spent nothing for the same result. Who's the better business person now?

Scorpio 10/23-11/21

You find it ironic that the colors red, while and blue represent freedom until they're flashing behind you.

Sagittarius 11/22-12/21

Facebook retains ownership of everything you post, so now all you have you have to do is figure out how to upload your debt and your kids.

Capricorn 12/22-1/19

Taking pics of your food has finally replaced taking your pic in the bathroom mirror? So now your friends will be able to see that you can't cook OR clean.

Aquarius 1/20-2/18

If you survey 100 women and ask them what shampoo they're using in the shower, ninety-eight percent will probably say, "How the hell did you get in here?"

Pisces 2/19-3/20

You are completely paranoid and always check behind their shower curtain and in closet before bed to check for murderers. In the event you find one, what's your plan?
